About Us

At LCHC, we are committed to delivering culturally safe, trauma-informed primary care for Indigenous Peoples in the Campbell River area—including urban and away-from-home First Nations, Métis, and Inuit. We recognize that health is more than physical; it includes emotional, mental, and spiritual balance, while honoring Indigenous Knowledge systems.

Our Circle of Care—compassionate health professionals working alongside each participant—supports every wellness journey. We draw strength from our past relatives, LFLS trailblazers, and Old Ones, whose teachings guide us to center culture as vital to identity and healing.

Grounded in Two-Eyed Seeing, a teaching shared by Mi'kmaq Elder Albert Marshall, we bridge Indigenous and Western ways of knowing to create space for all forms of healing. We honour the sacred role of life-givers, strengthen families and communities, and uphold the values that shaped LFLS more than 35 years ago.

Our vision is an empowered, thriving community where Indigenous health and healing are the standard. Through advocacy, allyship, and community-led, culturally rooted care, we strive to uphold the highest standards in Indigenous healthcare and walk together with clients as true partners in wellness—today and for generations to come.
